The Csepel K-300 is about the same as the GMC truck. Each driver was trained to maintain his own vehicle. This maintenance consisted of minor adjustments, greasing and cleaning. All replacement of minor parts was done at the battalion maintenance shop which consisted of four mechanics. Major repairs were done at the division repair shop in Budapest. The maintenance procedure required oil to be changed for summer and winter and each 1,500 to 3,000 kms. The maintenance and supply of spare parts was always good on Soviet and Hungarian vehicles.

3.

a six-month course at the Driver Training School, Zach Street, Budapest. Training consisted of:
